

LIME: pours out very dark amber-red . almost no head , which dissappears quickly . “ thick ” aroma , rich maltiness , some toast , maybe a bit of cherry or some berry ( i do n’t often eat berries of any type , makes it hard to discern ) . alcohol is pretty easy to pick up though . very rich malty flavour , a little sweet at first ; i get a hit of chocolate malt , maybe very slightly fruity . alcohol quite prominent . sweet malt flavour falls off at finish and leaves mouth a little dry . mouthfeel quite thick , and more carbon dioxide in beer than is suggested by lack of head . all in all , i give it a pretty ok , its definately a strong flavour and aroma . got ta give it a little while for drinking , ca n’t down this quick ( not that i ’d ever want to ) .
