

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and a number of initiatives have been developed to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Mental Health Act 1983 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a further landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital.

The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital.

The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital.

The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital.

The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital.

The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital. The Mental Health Act 2003 was a landmark piece of legislation which gave people with mental health problems the right to be treated in the community rather than in hospital.