

0:01

Tell me about alpacas.

Alpaca are South American camelids that are known for their soft, luxurious wool. They are a domesticated species and have been bred for their fiber since pre-Incan times. Alpacas are very social animals and live in herds of up to 15 individuals. They are an important source of income for many Peruvian and Bolivian farmers.