

Once upon a time, there was an ancient rose. The rose was very special because it was old and beautiful.

It grew in the garden of a large mansion that belonged to a rich lord. The rose had many admirers, but there was one who loved it more than any other: its gardener, Mrs. Brown! Each day she looked after the rose carefully and tended each leaf with love; because she gave her great happiness every time she blossomed on this earth."

She was the most beautiful rose that had ever been known. Her name was The Fairy Rose, and she gave a smile to all who saw her, like sunshine for all hearts.

A small bird came to visit every day, singing a beautiful song of love as he perched on her red petals.

One day the rose saw that her beautiful petals were fading away. She cried and begged the gardener to save them. But the gardener replied: "My dear rose, you must accept that your time has passed and leave for another to give joy with her smile."

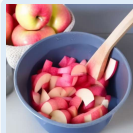

The rose's petals were collected by Mrs. Brown and put away safely for future use in celebration. It was never forgotten, but it will always be remembered as the most beautiful fairy Rose that had ever been known.

How to make apple juice.

Step 1: Rinse and cut 4 apples into quarters. Set the clean apples on a cutting board and remove the cores and seeds. You can leave the peels on the apples. Then cut each apple into 4 equal-sized pieces.

Step 2: In a large bowl, place the apple pieces and add water.

Use enough water to fully cover the apples. Then stir gently with a wooden spoon.

Step 3: Place a strainer on top of the large bowl and squeeze out as much juice from each apple piece that you can. If there is pulp left over in your bowl after pressing all fruit with the spoon, then press it again by gently pushing down harder to extract more fluid.

Step 4: Pour juice into a large container or pitcher. If you want to remove the pulp from your apple juice, strain it with cheesecloth and use an ice-cube tray to form blocks of hardened leftover juices; add them in glass jars while using apples for cooking later as they freeze well!

Enjoy a crisp and sweet apple juice!
