

Case

“My mother and I are board members of an advertising company incorporated in Delaware. We have business trips every now and then; for example, to meet with potential advertisers. Is it okay to file trip expenses as deductible expenses of the company?”

INFORMATION

Issue

Whether business trip expenses incurred by the mother and son, who are board members of a Delaware-incorporated advertising company, are deductible.

Rule

- Federal income tax law
- Delaware General Corporation Law...

“Ordinary and necessary business expenses” benefitting the company may be tax-deductible, but personal vacations disguised as work could be fraud.

Analysis

- The company’s ordinary and necessary business is implementing advertising campaigns for clients.
- Meetings with potential advertisers are crucial for their business success.
- They had almost no time for personal enjoyment.

Conclusion

Yes, your travel can be filed as legitimate, deductible company expenses. Make sure to keep records of justification.
