The works of art he brings back with him to France comprise important pieces, including this s tuning bell. = This Imperial bell, called bianzhong is, in many ways, exceptional. The magnificent and highly detailed chiseling of the bell speaks f or itself: this bianzhong is truly a superb exampl e of Kangxi refinement. A twofaced dragon stands on top of the bell, its muscular body firmly stand ing on clawed legs, used to hang the bell from the wooden frame. The body of the bell is divided in t hree registers: the upper one holds a pattern of s tyliized clouds, so does the lower one, with add ed perfectly round medallions, where the bell is hit to produce the sound. In between, the dragon's bod ies chasing the pearl among swirls of clouds unfur ls, revealing glistening scales chiseled to perfec tion. = Bianzhong bells are grouped as carillons.

... nth through the seventeenth centuries. = Relig ious scholars, both Jewish and Christian, and Euro pean architects, continuously sought to reconstru t an "authentic" image of the ancient city and Tem ple in order to better understand the biblical eve nts of the past. Many subsequent works of architec ture such as churches and synagogues, including th e Sistine Chapel, were inspired by the desire to r e-create Solomon's Temple. Early modern artists of ten depicted the Holy Land and the Temple of Jerus alem in the backgrounds of paintings and prints po rtraying biblical subjects. Moreover, Christians, Jews, and Muslims embarked upon pilgrimages to Jer usalem to renew their faith. In fulfillment of env isioned events of the End of Days, Christians, Jew s, and Muslims focused upon Jerusalem as the site for these mystical events. European travelers were attracted by the exotic landscape and people of th is region in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuri es, and Jewish settlers of the early 20th century viewed Palestine as an ancient homeland of refuge
