

Writing Style = -0.91

... at the dock"-I said it did open certain place s at the dock-he said it was the key of the room h e hired of a publican in Old Gravel-lane, and the room was at No. 3, Johnson-street-I said, "Am I to understand that it was the key of the garret at No . 3, Johnson-street?"-he said it was-I said, "You shall have fair play"-I then went to No. 3, Johnso n-street, and found the key fitted the garret door lock-I said to Clark, "When I asked you on Friday where you got the key, you told me you did not kno w"-he said, "Yes, I was so confused, I did not kno w what I was saying"-I found some lucifers on the top of the warehouse-I saw the foreman pick up som e lucifers under the lantern near Tent-street-her e are some lucifers produced by Swingland and by Jud ge-they all appear to be of the same description-t here were four more matches, which were left at th e police-court-this is a piece of cord I found on the head of one of the hogheads of tobacco unde r the lantern. [⚡] Cross-examined by MR. WILKINS. Q. A re you at all acquainted with the process of makin

Writing Style = 0.20

... urse, in the meantime, everybody knew what had happened. Everybody knew that I got lost in the fo rest. Everybody knew that I had to be helicoptered out. They found it generally quite amusing, mostly made fun of me. There wasn't a lot of sympathy. Pe ople around me thought, "Listen, you should have k nown better, and you didn't. Too bad for you," whi ch really isn't wrong. [⚡] People in this very smal l community, including my very good friends, were Swiss ski instructors, which is an extremely hard profession to obtain, triathletes, really serious outdoors people. The idea that this North American bikes into the forest and can't find her way out. They were not sympathetic really at all. My friend s did find the situation funny. And I did, too. So , there was really a sense of embarrassment. All t he same emotions that I had felt sitting in that s helter, I felt again afterward because I thought, "Oh, what's my defense to this?" Then, I received a bill in the mail, and the bill was from the very nice folks who had arrived with the helicopter. It

Writing Style = 1.04

... ymanski and Caroline scouted out the pens and quickly found the two fillies Caroline had on her list, but the colt was on the northern side of the Island, which meant Caroline wouldn't have a chanc e to see him until the northern herd was rounded u p and put in the pens on the southern side to awai t the much anticipated swim. When Caroline finally saw the colt, it was love at first sight. [⚡] The da y before the swim, Caroline was at the pens to see what foals would be tagged as "bubbybacks" (foals th at are returned to the island to replenish the her ds). Caroline had been told only fillies (female f oals) would be kept as there were too many stallio ns on the island already. As she looked over the p ens, her heart did a summersault. Both the fillies she was considering bore the red tag of a buyback. She was glad her number one pick was a colt and th at she would at least have a shot at bidding on hi m. Just as that thought went through her mind, her phone went off. It was one of the Feather Fund gir ls calling to tell Caroline the colt the she had f

Writing Style = 1.81

... e lit window serves as a beacon. Someone is aw ake within the practice. Too late to be still work ing. [⚡] The light belongs to one of the offices. Dr . Bethany Brooks within it, perusing patient files and making notations here or there. Busy work. To keep her awake and to stave off the blood filled d reams that have haunted her the past few evenings. [⚡] Silence in the darkness is easy for one that liv es solely within the evening's embrace. For severa l nights now, Marius has stood in the shadows, wat ching, listening to the movements that lie within those walls, both on the lower level and above; si nce he's learned where it is she works, and appare ntly resides. [⚡] Often spending time alone in the evening is a good way to hone one's senses. Though vampires have the ability to move quietly, doorkno bs do not. The familiar squeaky creak of the knob is heard. The light in the office snuffed as she w aits only a heartbeat to see if there will follow other noises. [⚡] None appear to be forthcoming. Gat hering her robe from the chair Bethany situates it

Facts & Trivia = -1.45

... ologise, grovel, whatever it takes." [⚡] Jason's stern gaze pierced her soul. "It must be sincere o r he won't accept it." He leaned back in the chair , crossing his arms, appearing extremely forbiddin g. She actually shivered. [⚡] "Don't worry, he will believe me. I promise." She assured him. [⚡] "I have also summoned Anna and Karen via email to be at my office at 9 o'clock sharp. I intend giving them bo th a severe verbal warning and a disciplinary on t heir record." [⚡] He noted Alicia's satisfied expres sion. [⚡] "However, I will be asking you to join us at 9.30 to apologise for what you did to them." [⚡] Her mouth dropped open and she gasped. "No, Jason, don't make me do that, please." She pleaded with h er eyes as well as her words. [⚡] "That is only fair , Alicia. You don't want to fuel their accusations with favouritism, do you? And I expect you to reim burse Anna for her tyres. They need to know that y ou have been punished for your part in this fiasco ." [⚡] He was adamant and she knew better than to ar gue, especially now that there were consequences.

Facts & Trivia = -0.65

... nce McMahon wouldn't allow it until he got int o an angle with Jerry Lawler, which led to him bei ng at the announcers table. [⚡] "[Vince] didn't wan t me to talk," Taz revealed. "I didn't get on the mic and believe me, I had some pretty good promo w ork at ECW and I had my catchphrase 'beat me if yo u can, survive if I let you' and he didn't care. H e kind of wanted to re-brand me. And they don't te ll you that. You kind of have to figure that out o n your own. So fast forward a little bit, maybe a year or so, year and a half, I got into an angle w ith JR [Jim Ross] and that was at the Garden where I got verbal with JR and cut a promo on JR. Then t hey had Jerry Lawler punch me and he knocks me o n my ass. I get into a big pull apart with king and me and king get into this angle for a couple weeks . Well, that angle is what put me at the announcee desk because they had me take out Lawler before Sm ackDown, or something like that, and I sat next to Michael Cole. I was supposed to sit there for a se gment and then Jerry Lawler was supposed to attack

Facts & Trivia = 0.17

... but still present, heart churning. You watch t he organ throb from underneath the holes in the lung - it's just begging to escape. It would be so e asy to reach in and take it, and you would if it c ould save your sister. She's nearly at the top of the donor waiting list. [⚡] Distracted, you look bac k at the black burnt rubber on the pavement leadi ng up to impact. Your hands go through the motio ns of saving her; it's second nature at this point, but when everything happens at this speed it's eas y to get left behind, so you refocus. Saving lives is your job. [⚡] The left side of the girl's face is only halfway there, almost as charred as her arm, which sports a new unnatural angle thanks to an un sheathed bone. When she was thrown from her seat s he must've turned slightly for her fatal surr al g the cement. This isn't anyone's first call; you' re all veterans who have seen every horror imagina ble before. Knowing when people will live or die c omes with the territory. This girl will die. She w ill not live long enough to see the hospital. Your

Facts & Trivia = 1.13

... ay around the lavacombs. The sewage system's l ack of life had her thoroughly confused. Even bac k home, where there was technology aplenty, the unde rground waterways were flooded, not just with wast e, but also with monsters. Their unsanitary condit ions provided the perfect nesting grounds for para uses, slimes, gorges, and other incarnations of f ilth. [⚡] By contrast, Borrok Peak's sewers were emp ty, devoid of both excrement and the life it attra cted. Anything that was discarded was incinerated the moment it reached the pipe's bottom. The enviro nment served as the perfect disposal system, so l ong as the people inhabiting it didn't mind the co nstant threat of a society-ending eruption. The pi pes, the vessels used to transport the borroks' wa ste, could just as easily serve to carry magma up into the city. [⚡] Staring at the plumbing, the half bred wandered around until she stumbled across a landmark. She realised, as she neared the lava cha mber's center, that not all the tubes were open. Th e ones directly above the largest pit were shut o

Educational Value = -1.63

... r, run along to fetch me some clothes." [⚡] That shut him up even if he remained facing her. "Xfine wfikagdolpa?" He spoke to her in a guttural tongu e that sent shivers dancing along her skin. [⚡] She ignored how his voice affected her and concentrated on the fact she didn't understand a damned thing he said. "I don't know what the hell you just said , so do you want to try again in English instead o f whatever alien language you're using." She tappe d a bare foot as she glared at him imperiously-nak ed or not, she refused to show fear even if inside , she quivered at the situation. [⚡] He snarled some foreign words before throwing something at her and stalking out of the room. Fabric hit her as she wa tched in stunned amazement how the previously use n door just slid across the opening, leaving the wall seamless again. [⚡] Unsure of when the annoyed alien freak would return, she scrambled to get int o the clothes, his she surmised judging by the siz e and style: a white tunic shirt that hung to her knees and pants that hugged her rounded ass but we

Educational Value = -0.80

... more fishy goodness from that red bucket in fr ont of me. [⚡] I fished out the second fish (see wha t I did there?) and focused on making a better thr ow of it this time. I'd noticed that the Keeper ha d chucked them higher up on the rocks so that Huds on would have to climb up to get them, and thus be visible to more people than he was down by the edg e of the pool. So I heaved the fish treat and mana ged to get it up a couple of levels, which was a c ouple of levels higher than the first throw - not too shabby! [⚡] Pleased with myself, I pulled out th e third and final fish in the bucket, and waited w hile Hudson ate the one I hadn't botched. He seeme d to like wandering across the exhibit, making sur e no one was feeling left out, and that everyone c ould see him from where they were standing. He esp ecially wanted them to know he was eating fish, an d that he had an amazing bucket to show them after the fish were done! When Hudson came back to our e nd of the exhibit, I paused to take some pics on m y phone, commemorating the moment for myself, and

Educational Value = -0.66

... nd he was enthralled. His workload piling up a t the lab, he couldn't pull himself away from the whale. He quickly learned that auditory stimulatio n was a much greater reward for Skana than food. W hat came in the following months was a melody of t ungs as Paul played everything from the Beatles an d Rolling Stones to Bach. Skana loved them all. Pa ul was forced to accept that Skana was much more i ntelligent than any other terrestrial mammal he'd come in contact with. She was almost certainly, go ing crazy in her little pool, her calls reverberat ing and echoing off the concrete walls, with just a few humans for company. Capable of speeds up to 30 knots, Skana was resigned to swimming in slow c ircles day after day. It was apparent to Paul what needed to be done: Skana needed to go home. [⚡] But when he did present his findings, a storm of contr oversy followed at the aquarium. They didn't want Skana to be a sentient intelligent being. They wan ted the equivalent of an aquatic dog that would do tricks and keep people coming through the turnstil

Educational Value = 0.82

... as she didn't have the energy for anything els e. [⚡] Play: W made beds for her toy dogs out of sho e boxes, using all the face cloths, napkins and to wels in the house for bedding. [⚡] She also played w ith her magnetic pop-up toys a lot, then later pla yed independently with her dolls and cars, getting them set up for a journey and working out a compli cated hierarchy regarding who sat where. This last ed over a few days. [⚡] Board Games: My stepdaughter , D (8) had a new board game - Chinese Checkers. W e all played it and W picked up the rules quickly and followed them well. She even figured out skill ul moves. [⚡] Politics: General conversations with W this week have covered: the law around sending chi ldren to school, children's rights in relation to this, Donald Trump and his wall, who pays for the Queen's palaces, gay rights, racism in America, gu n control in America, and women's rights. All of t hese conversations were instigated by W, who appea rs at this stage to have a keen interest in politi cs and how the world works. [⚡] Hopefully, we will d

Required Expertise = -1.65

... ew one of them, my friend Megs. The other peop le were her friends she'd met in Hong Kong. Two of the girls were visiting from Australia. Another wa s a native Utahn who brought her husband along to the dinner-they were newlyweds. [⚡] Eventually, the conversation turned to the subject of marriage and the two at the table who had any say in it spoke u p. The husband was several years younger than his wife, something that surprised me because of how o ften a few of my guy friends would reiterate the f act that they would never date an older woman. [⚡] S he went on to explain he might have had a guess bu t he didn't really know until he had already falle n for her. [⚡] So I guess that's how you do it. If y ou want to snag a younger man, don't tell him your age. [⚡] Okay, fast forward a number of months. [⚡] I' m on a blind date with this guys that my younger b rother set me up with. They told me that he was yo unger than me, but didn't tell me by how much. Whe n I met him, he looked 22. As we talked, I learned that he was at least older than that judging by th

Required Expertise = -0.89

... nstructions, safe but it did linger for a few days. [⚡] I found night one and the next few nights pretty uncomfortable, but that says more about our old mattress than the Rem-Fit 400. According to th e Ts & Cs at Rem-Fit they recommend that you slee p on your new mattress for a minimum of 30 nights to allow enough time for your body to fully adjust, w hich gives some comforting encourage to pursue (it 's worth it, honest). We tested this mattress durin g the summer months, too, which has been somewh at a mixed bag of temperatures but the mattress - wit h its open cell memory foam which provides a degre e of temperature regulation - coped perfectly. Wit h our wool duvet (cool in summer, warm in winter), cotton mattress protector (for extending the matr ess longevity) and the window open we both slept t hrough the nights, undisturbed unless it was to p up my glass of water which I like to keep full a t my side of the bed at all times (it's comfort tin g). [⚡] To get an idea of the motion transfer I wa s paying more attention to how Joe moves around on

Required Expertise = -0.17

... as come forward with a shocking story about ho w his mother attempted to force him to be transgen der starting at the age of eight. [⚡] "I didn't know who I was," Lucas told Sausage Roll. His mother dr essed him in girl's clothes before school, which r esulted in alienation and confusion within the poo r lad. He explained the shocking story about how t he LGBT abuse started in his life. [⚡] "My parents m et online on some, now defunct, dating website. My father is an Australian labour worker and my mothe r was working as a waitress in Los Angeles, Califo rnia, at the time," Lucas wrote in an email. [⚡] "I grew up and went to school in Australia and everyt hing was quite normal. I had a few friend and we'd hang out and play video-games or just mess around at the local part," he added. [⚡] Lucas' childhood was normal until his parents split up, which is wh en his mother without a strong patriarchal figure around to keep her in check started abusing her so n by instilling transgender dogma into him. Lucas was forced to move to America, which alienated him

Required Expertise = 0.53

... sentence is our introduction to The Crooked M an, and it warrants examination, for it contains a very singular point of interest. [⚡] Notice that Wat son tells us that the day in question occurred a f ew months after his marriage. We have commented on the frequency of Watson's participation in Holmes' cases in the months following Watson's marriage, a nd yet, it begs repeating, for it really is quite suggestive. Recall that Watson, according to Barin g-Gould, married Mary Morstan on May 1, 1889. Acco rding to Baring-Gould, the following cases took pl ace 'a few months after Watson's marriage: [⚡] The B oscombe Valley Mystery [⚡] The Stockbroker's Clerk [⚡] The Naval Treaty [⚡] The Cardboard Box [⚡] The Enginee r's Thumb [⚡] And this is limited to using Baring-Go old's dates. If we assume Mary to be Watson's firs t (and possibly only) wife, then we must also acco unt for the cases Baring-Gould dated during Watson 's supposed first marriage. In fact, were we to co unt the number of cases Watson's sets some few mon ths after his marriage, I expect we would be quite